One of the sponsors of our website rrdxa.eu is the company Höhne. The Höhne team is anxious to supply its customers with equipment and service since now 35 years, in order to enable them to take part and be successful in ham radio, the finest hobby of the world.

The Höhne company is anxious to supply its customers with equipment and service since now 35 years, in order to enable them to take part and be successful in ham radio, the finest hobby of the world.

Since that time, we are authorized contract dealer for the manufacturers YAESU, KENWOOD, and ICOM. By personal contacts with our customers, we try to support the experimental character of ham radio on the technical and operating level.

This includes a comprehensive advice of the hams during installation and extension of their own station.

We have an approximately 200 square meters large exhibition room, which can be used for testing of all well-known ham radio equipment, including accessories. For that purpose, there are a number of antenna installations available on the companies site. We offer repair and service during the warranty time and beyond.

The company is located in a small commercial area in the city of Bochum. Bochum is about 40 miles northeast from Cologne; Germany, (Locator JO31OM).
